

The Definition of Good Teaching

By Ella Carson

Coral Way Elementary

A good teacher prepares a lesson like a gourmet dish prepared by a master chef.
She feeds the students each morsel of knowledge until there is none left.
It is the odor of glue, the fragrance of a new marker; the aroma of lunch so perfectly seasoned.
It is inhaling knowledge, exhaling ignorance and gives life reason.
It smells like a new back pack, new sneakers and brand new books.
A good teacher combines learning from each subject like a professional cook.
She shows the students how all of the subjects blend together.
She prepares them to face any kind of weather.
It is like a breath of fresh air when everything is neat and in order.
It does not give an air of dread where days seem longer and life seems shorter.
When a recipe is perfectly blended it makes one hunger for more.
A good education makes a student satisfied, confident and sure.

Teaching sounds like a masterpiece each note is perfectly placed.
Each lesson is carefully prepared and taught with eloquence and grace.
Teaching is the sound of students counting, reading and reciting their ABC's.
It is learning the art of living and what life really means.
A student should hear good thoughts in his wake and in his sleep.
A good teacher will share old wisdom to treasure and to keep.
A good teacher sounds like a parent who cares about their child.
A good teacher is a human being whose voice is tender and mild.
The sound of many instruments perfectly arranged as a symphony
All of the notes coming together in perfect harmony.

Teaching feels wonderful like the warmth of the sun.
Everyone in accordance, when the teacher and student are one
It feels like a ray of sunshine as it warms and comforts the skin.
It feels as cozy as a blanket when learning comes from within.
A good teacher insists on learning, students are captivated at her command.
She is a foundation of support she is a helping hand.

Teaching looks like a painting that is a work of art
Knowledge and wisdom comes from the soul, it is a work of heart.
A teacher brings the lessons around to make life a bit brighter.
She gives students understanding to make their burdens lighter.
Teaching is connecting all of the senses in concert to learn.
It is something that is given freely but also must be earned.

Good tastes like a bowl of soup that nourishes the soul.
Students internalize knowledge, wisdom and lessons from leaders of old.
Students learn reading and writing, they learn to communicate.
They learn to build good character, to walk a path that is straight.
Teaching is like a good apple, it's sweet and healthy.
It leads to a life of pleasure, a life of peace, and one that is wealthy.
